Live From The Hotel Edison Times Square Chronicles Presents", is normally filmed from the Hotel Edison, but due to several conflicts we did the show zoom style.

When the ball dropped on Times Square, resolutions fly. But one quiet, universal wish rises above them all: to love and be loved in return. And for a growing number of elite Jewish singles, that wish now comes with a name—Rachel Brown. This week on Live From the Hotel Edison, owner Suzanna Bowling is honored to introduce Jewish Matchmaker Rachel Brown.

Rachel Brown is a modern-day matchmaker with ancient roots, Rachel Brown is the founder and CEO of Jewish Matchmaking NY, a premier boutique service redefining what it means to find your person—with purpose. Long before algorithms and dating apps flooded the scene, Rachel was orchestrating soulful connections, starting at age 12 by rearranging dinner party seating charts. With over 30 years of success in business, fashion, and design, she brings intuitive precision, spiritual insight, and a fierce cultural devotion to every match she makes. Two years ago, after a series of vivid dreams and divine nudges, she launched her invitation-only service—now a sought-after force from Manhattan to Tel Aviv. Whether she's reuniting former flames or bridging unexpected pairings, Rachel's mission remains clear: to protect Jewish legacy, combat assimilation, and help love bloom in the spaces where tradition meets destiny. Her newest venture? Expanding to include high-profile LGBTQ+ matchmaking for Jewish singles ready for real, sacred love. Because when it comes to heart-led connections, Rachel Brown doesn't just play Cupid—she answers a calling.

I am so grateful to my guest Rachel Brown for being with us to help us kick off the New Year and to Dr Sal Cumella for introducing us.

We are so proud because the show and our guests are featured on the TV screens in the lobby and the hotel rooms.

Thank-you Magda Katz for videoing and creating the content to go live, and Rommel Gopez and The Hotel Edison for their kindness and hospitality.

We are so thrilled that Variety Entertainment News just named us one of Summer's Best Picks in the category of Best Television, Radio, Podcasts. The company we are in, has made us so humbled, grateful and motivated to continue.
